

Contents

Preface	11
Introduction	18
CHAPTER 1
The theoretical landscape	29
The »signaletic material« of film	37
Haptic surfaces and affective effects	39
CHAPTER 2
Haptic surfaces and spatial effects in Trier's films of the 1980s	50
CHAPTER 3
A tiger in The Kingdom	64
The transformation from Gothic to grotesque
A ghost story	65
From Gothic eeriness to grotesque laughter on the surface of the TV screen	68
The real-time effect of electronic signals – introduction to The Kingdom I	75
Breaching – the conclusion of The Kingdom I	79
The perforation from upper to underside in the narrative's Möbius strip	86
Grotesque real-time interfaces: surveillance, scans and X-ray	90
The technological and mythological credo of the video medium	94
The haptic level in The Kingdom I and II	98
»The body without organs« and the »becoming-animal«	106

CHAPTER 4
	Dogme 95 and The Idiots	112
	A new form of realism
	The »Dogme 95 Manifesto« and the »Vow of Chastity«	115
	A diagrammatic production of factual reality in the form of haptic »Figures«	120
	The Dogme diagram – a generator of haptic compositions and modes of perception	125
	Deformation of the face and the fall of the body	134
CHAPTER 5
	Golden Hearts 1 and 3	139
	Affective outflow into the landscape and the music
	The power of the rejected	146
	Breaking the Waves and »faciality«	149
	Any-space-whatever and colours in Breaking the Waves and Dancer in the Dark	155
	Dancer in the Dark and »the refrain«	163
CHAPTER 6
	America films	175
	Verfremdung and diagrammatic production
	Planes of composition in Dogville	177
	Capitalistic segmentarity and terroristic micropolitics in Dogville	184
	Microperceptual affect in Dogville	188
	Compositional planes in Manderlay	194
	Struggle in the binary segmentation	197
	Dividual qualitative transformation and an ethics of affect	201
CHAPTER 7
	The boss and the performative-biographical	209
	The aesthetics of the fall
	Heterotopy, diagram and divid	219
	The one who falls: on Lars' turning Jørgen into a performative I	227

CHAPTER 8

Affective figures of depression, melancholia and mania 235

- Antichrist* – in nature, chaos reigns 236
- Nietzsche – The Dionysian and the Apollinian 241
- Tarkovsky and the »eternal recurrence of the same« 255
- Time as the »powers of the false«, creation and transformation 258
- Melancholia* – the world's Dionysian underground 262
- Iconoclasm 266
- The rescue of melancholia from ›the world as will and idea« 268
- Tristan und Isolde* – Wagner as intermediary 271
- The end of the world – figures for interpretation 273
- Affect and event 276
- Schopenhauer's melancholia, Nietzsche's Zarathustra, and Arendt's thinker 279
- Affective diagrams: a haptic, signaletic material in Antichrist and Melancholia 284
- Nymphomaniac* – mania's (self)destructive force 291
- Two kinds of diagram: material signs and signaletic material 294
- The subversive potential of sexual desire in chapters 1-4 304
- The asexual, super sensual woman in chapter 5 322
- The sadistic woman's unfolding in chapters 6-8 327

CHAPTER 9

Concluding remarks on Lars von Trier's filmic affect diagrams 347

Bibliography 353