

Contents

Foreword	11
1. The web of war	13
1.1. Introduction	13
1.2. History of research – a struggle for identity	16
1.3. The written sources	17
1.3.1. The written sources: the geography of the peoples of Germania	18
1.3.2. The written sources: military and society	20
1.4. Gladiator: civilisation against the barbarian	23
1.5. Graves as a source of history and social organisation	24
1.6. Weapon graves as a source of information about barbarian armament and military organisation	26
1.7. The Scandinavian bog deposits	36
1.7.1. Armament and technology	37
1.7.2. Spearheads and javelins	37
1.7.3. Shields	42
1.7.4. Shield bosses of wood and wicker and spearheads of bone	44
1.7.5. Archery	45
1.7.6. Cavalry, horses and boats	46
1.7.7. Logistics and crafts	47
1.7.8. Army sizes	48
1.7.9. The structure of the armies	48
1.7.10. Body count	50
1.7.11. Fighting style	51
1.7.12. Combat	53
1.7.13. Who were warriors – elite armies or conscripts?	54

2. Chronologies	57
2.1.1. Introduction to method	57
2.1.2. Typologies	57
2.2. Poland: the Przeworsk and the Oksywie cultures	59
2.2.1 State of research	60
2.2.2. Hachmann 1951 and 1961	60
2.2.3. Dąbrowska 1988	67
2.2.4. The Kamieńczyk cemetery (Dąbrowska 1997)	74
2.2.5. Godłowski 1970	75
2.2.6. Godłowski 1977	75
2.2.7. Liana 1970	79
2.2.8. Łuczkiewicz 2006	81
2.2.9. Conclusion: the present state of the chronology of the Przeworsk culture	87
2.2.10. Introduction of a new chronology of Polish weapon graves	87
2.2.11. The Oksywie graves and the West Balt graves	87
2.2.12. Deviation 1: the typology of pre-Roman period spearheads	88
2.2.13. Deviation 2: the typology of the Polish La Tène sword	88
2.2.14. Other deviations from conventional typology	92
2.2.15. Process of analysis	93
2.2.16. The Kamieńczyk anomaly	93
2.2.17. The thimble rivet anomaly	94
2.2.18. Result: the chronology of Polish weapon graves (Po 1-12)	94
2.2.19. The Pre-Roman period (Po 1-4c)	97
2.2.20. The Early Roman period (Po 5-10b)	97
2.2.21. The Late Roman period (Po 10c-12)	101
2.2.22. Evaluation and regionality	104
2.2.23. The Oksywie culture (Oks 1-5)	106
2.2.24. The Oder Przeworsk culture (OP 1-11)	108
2.2.25. The Vistula Przeworsk culture (VP 1-10)	112
2.2.26. The Wielkopolskie and Mazowieckie chronologies	116
2.2.27. The Eastern Przeworsk zone (EP)	119
2.2.28. Southern and central Poland (SCP)	121
2.2.29. Correspondence between the overall and regional chronologies	123
2.2.30. Phase statistics	130
2.2.31. Summary and discussion	133
2.3. Germany	135
2.3.1. The Middle Elbe and the Großromstedt cemetery	135
2.3.2. Hackmann 1961	137
2.3.3. Spearheads	137
2.3.4. The chronology of the Middle Elbe region (ME 1-5)	137
2.3.5. The Lower Elbe	141
2.3.6. The chronology of the Hamfelde cemetery (1971)	143

2.3.7. Bantelmann 1990	143
2.3.8. Adler 1993	143
2.3.9. The typology of spearheads and javelin heads	146
2.3.10. A new chronology of the Lower Elbe region	151
2.3.11. The Pre-Roman period (LE 1)	151
2.3.12. The Early Roman period (LE 2-LE 6)	152
2.3.13. The Late Roman period (LE 7)	155
2.3.14. Lower Elbe phase statistics	155
2.3.15. Northern Schleswig-Holstein	157
2.3.16. Northeastern Germany: Mecklenburg and Brandenburg	158
2.3.17. Eastern Germany in the Late Roman period (MB 6-7)	160
2.3.18. The Rhine	162
2.3.19. Barbarians in a border zone	163
2.4. Bohemia and Moravia	165
2.4.1. Godłowski 1992	166
2.4.2. A new typology of spearheads	166
2.4.3. A new analysis of the chronology of Bohemian and Moravian weapon graves	169
2.4.4. Phases (BM 1-6)	169
2.4.5. Phase statistics	170
2.4.6. Concluding remarks	172
2.4.7. Correlation and conclusions: Germany and Bohemia/Moravia	173
2.5 Scandinavia	175
2.5.1. A Late Roman period Scandinavian chronology – Iversen 2008	176
2.5.2. Weapon graves in Denmark	176
2.5.3. The state of research on weapon chronology in Denmark	176
2.5.4. New typologies	178
2.5.5. Spearheads of the Late Pre-Roman and Early Roman periods	178
2.5.6. Shield bosses of the Late Pre-Roman and Early Roman periods	182
2.5.7. Correspondence analysis of Danish weapon graves	183
2.5.8. The relative chronology of Danish weapon graves	185
2.5.9. The Pre-Roman period (Dk 1-3)	185
2.5.10. The Early Roman period (Dk 4-7)	187
2.5.11. The Late Roman period (Dk 8-12)	190
2.5.12. Roman imports in Danish weapon graves	192
2.5.13. Phase statistics	192
2.5.14. Sweden and Baltic Scandinavia	193
2.5.15. Previous work on Swedish weapon chronology	195
2.5.16. Spearheads of the Late Pre-Roman and Early Roman period	196
2.5.17. Single-edged swords	200
2.5.18. Correspondence analysis of Swedish and Baltic weapon graves (Ba 1-12)	201
2.5.19. The Pre-Roman period	202
2.5.20. The Early Roman period (Ba 3-5)	204

2.5.21. The Late Roman period (Ba 6-12)	205
2.5.22. Brooches and Roman imports in Swedish weapon graves	209
2.5.23. Norway	209
2.5.24. The chronology of Bemmann and Hahne	211
2.5.25. Early Roman period spearhead typology	212
2.5.26. Correspondence analysis	213
2.5.27. The Early Roman period (No 1-3)	215
2.5.28. The Late Roman period (No 4-10)	217
2.5.29. Brooches and Roman imports in Norwegian weapon graves	219
2.5.30. Correlation of the Scandinavian chronologies	220
2.5.31. The great bog finds	221
2.5.32. Illerup Ådal	223
2.5.33. Ejsbøl	224
2.5.34. Nydam	225
2.5.35. Thorsberg	227
2.5.36. Kragehul	228
2.5.37. Vimose	229
2.5.38. Vingsted	233
2.5.39. Hedelisker	234
2.5.40. Illemose	234
2.5.41. Porskjær	235
2.5.42. Trinnemose	235
2.5.43. Tranbær Mose	235
2.5.44. Villestofte	236
2.5.45. Sørup	236
2.5.46. Dallerup	236
2.5.47. Alken Enge	237
2.5.48. Deposits on Bornholm: Balsmyr and Knarremose	237
2.5.49. Skedemosse	238
2.5.50. Hassle Bösarps	238
2.5.51. Correlation between graves and bog deposits	239
2.6. The chronology of Roman imports	241
2.6.1. Research questions	241
2.6.2. Seriation of graves containing Roman imports	242
2.6.3. Roman imports chronology RI 1-7	243
2.6.4. The chronology of Roman imports and indigenous accessories RIA 1-7b	247
2.6.5. Conclusion	249
2.6.6. Mapping the Roman import chronology	252
2.7. Correlation studies	253
2.8. Absolute chronology	256
2.8.1. Battlefields	256
2.8.2. Bog finds	258

2.8.3. Roman military equipment	259
2.8.4. Roman imports	260
2.9. Absolute chronology and phase statistics: the history of the weapon burial practice	263
2.9.1. Poland	263
2.9.2. Germany	264
2.9.3. Bohemia and Moravia	266
2.9.4. Scandinavia	266
2.9.5. Graves containing Roman imports	267
2.10. Conclusions on chronology	269
2.11. The typology and chronology of the Roman period sword	270
2.11.1. Method of description	271
2.11.2. Method of typology	273
2.11.3. Results	275
2.11.4. Gladii with triangular tips G-1 to G-10	275
2.11.5. Round-tipped gladii G-11 to G-23	278
2.11.6. Spathae with long grips S-LG1-15	278
2.11.7. Spathae with short grips and rhombic or octagonal cross sections S-1 to S-12	285
2.11.8. Spathae with short grips and fluted cross sections S-13 to S-20	285
2.11.9. Spathae with short grips and a wide, rectangular cross section S-21 to S-29	291
2.11.10. Spathae with a narrow rectangular cross section S-30 to S-35	293
2.11.11. Spathae with short grips and a hollow cross section S-36 to S-41	294
2.11.12. Pattern welding and manufacture	295
2.11.13. Stamps and incrustations	297
2.11.14. Roman or Germanic production	298
2.11.15 Chronology of swords and sword equipment	299
2.11.16. Roman sword equipment of the 1st century CE	299
2.11.17. The chronology of barbarian and Roman sword equipment	303
2.11.18. Concluding remarks	309

3. The web of war	311
3.1. Thoughts on distribution maps	311
3.1.1. Burial customs	312
3.1.2. The absence of weapon graves	313
3.1.3. Further potential bias	314
3.2. The Pre-Roman period	314
3.3 Pre-Roman period spearheads and javelin heads	319
3.4. Correspondence analysis, networks and regional differences: the early phases	320
3.5. The Late Pre-Roman period (1st century BCE)	323

3.6. The Early Roman period	328
3.7. Spearheads and javelins in the 1st to early 2nd century CE	329
3.8. Correspondence analysis, networks and regional differences in the 1st century CE ...	333
3.9. Late 1st-mid-2nd century CE	337
3.10. Correspondence analysis, networks and regional differences	341
3.11. The Late Roman period	344
3.12. Spearheads of the Late Roman period	350
3.13. Spearheads with a cylindrical socket	351
3.14. Spearheads of the Vennolum type	353
3.15. Other spearhead types	354
3.16. Correspondence analysis, networks and regional differences in the late 2nd and early 3rd century	355
3.17. After the early 3rd century CE	357
 4. Summary and conclusions	 359
4.1. History and burial data	359
4.2 Chronology	360
4.3. Fluctuating data and social history	360
4.4. The web of war	362
4.5. Networks and foreign fighters	364
4.6. Weapon burials as a dormant rite	365
4.7. Concluding remarks	366
 Bibliography	 367

Catalogue

Catalogue is available in digital format at the address: <http://jyskarkaeologiskselskab.dk/en/catalogues>